

Important notice! Second round of French presidential election

Dear Trader,

On Sunday, 7th May, the French will return to the polls to vote in the second round of their country's presidential election. Amid the political uncertainty, the financial markets associated with European shares and indices and also the euro may see increased volatility from Friday, 5th May, until Monday, 8th May.

With regard to that, we would like to advise you to carefully choose your order sizes and closely monitor your open positions. You should also ensure you have sufficient funds in your trading account to counter possible large price gaps during the above time period.

Please note that in case of extreme market volatility, it is possible for us to consider increasing our margin requirements, but should we decide to do so, you would be notified in advance.

In our Range of Markets you can find up-to-date information about the margin requirements and dealing spreads of all financial instruments available for trading.

Don't hesitate to get in touch with us in case you have any questions or need additional assistance.

Kind regards,
DF Markets
